The PC version of Dead Space 3. navigation A few years ago, a friend of mine, Mary Quinn, passed away. She had battled breast cancer for a long time. Her death was sudden, and it was a shock to everyone. And while I was a good friend of hers, I hadn't seen her for a few months, so my friendship with her was rather new. And, she had recently passed her driving test, so I hadn't seen her drive. I couldn't help but think, "I wish I'd taken that driving lesson." Mary, though, was often in the middle of things. She was a busy woman, but she gave of herself freely. She had an infectious energy. If you were around her, you couldn't help but want to be more like her. When she became ill, she was a busy woman, but she still found the time to make her friends smile and laugh. It was her way of showing love and caring for those around her. Mary passed away in January, 2009. My friend, Jane, posted this on Facebook the day of Mary's passing: "Mary Quinn 12/24/08–January 15, 2009. She was an amazing woman. She touched so many lives. I can still see her smile. She's going to make an amazing difference in the world. I know that. She's going to make a difference in the lives of others. That's just the way she was. Amazing. Love, Jane" I think Mary didn't live long enough to see the impact of what she had done with her time on earth. She passed away at the age of 47, but her legacy lives on. Mary's legacy lives on in the lives she touched. It's the same with all of us who have passed on. We leave this world, but our legacy lives on. Share this: Like this: 82157476af
